Portuguese Junta Cracks Down on Critics

By Henry Giniger LISBON, Aug. S (NYT) .-- Porbugal's military leaders, after announcing an extensive program to free the African colonies; put the country on notice today that those who criticize the armed forces will be "severely punished." As a first step, the seven-man junts led by President Antonio de Spinola indefinitely suspended a weekly newspaper of the ex-

ple's Fight), whose editor, Jose

Luis Saldanha Sanches, has been in a military prison since May.

The weekly, the organ of a group that calls itself the Maoist Movement for the Reorganization of the Portuguese Proletariat, was accused of repeatedly attacking the armed forces and their program and of casting doubts on their will to establish democracy at bome and to decolonize in Africa. The indefinite suspension appeared to run counter to news media to 60 days. During the weekend, the government was active on two vital but controversial fronts where considerable disciplina is considered necessary to carry programs through successfully. One concerns the colonial problem and the other the critical economic and social situation at home. Through UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, who left here yesterday after two days of talks. the government appounded its readiness to tree Guinea immediately and to start talks without delay with liberation movements in Angola and Mozambique to strike.

give those areas independence Although few voices have been raised here against the new policy, the government is wary of trouble, particularly among the considerable white populations in Angola and Mozambique, as the time approaches for an assumption of power by the hlack majorities military, came into office June 18, Gen. Spinola announced a new political phase in which priority would be given to discipline. Although the June press regula-tions said that news media's criticism of public acts was legitimate, the President and his military colleagues have since indicated that their capacity for tolerance is low, particularly con-cerning the small but energetic group of young Maoist revolutionaries who have been agitating since they emerged from clandestine status. Last week, when an outdoor rally they staged was reported by three afternoon papers, in articles including accounts of attacks on the military, they were suspended for a few days by the junta. When the entire press protested and threatened to go on strike, the suspensions were rescinded in an apparent retreat by the junta. Today, however, it returned to the offensive, warning: "Those who act criminally in a concrete tdeological aggression against the armed forces and the principles proclaimed by the [armed forces] movement, be it by written means or by preetings or public demonstrations, will be severely

Egypt Backs Claim of PLO To West Bank

CAIRO, Aug. 5 (UPI),-Egypt said today that it upposes the return of the Israell-occupied West Bank of Jordan to King Hussein's government.

The semi-official newspaper 'Al Ahram said that Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy outlined this stand by Egypt at a meeting yesterday with Sald Kamal, deputy chief of the Palestinian Liberation Organization's political department.

It quoted Mr. Pahmy as saying: "Egypt is committed to tha principle that the West Bank should not be returned to tha Jordanian civil and military authorities, for this is the land of the Palestinian people."

The Egyptian foreign minister was said to have told the PLO alde that Jordan's King Hussein committed himself to this stand during his talks in mid-July with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat. The criminal has also left threatening handwritten mes-seges which detectives think they can use to track him down, helped by handwriting experts. Since all the crimes have been committed in one area, police officials have asked for access to confidential files of Sweden's Central Bureau of Statistics, in which are compiled personal details and signatures of all Swedish citizens. The personal files were as-

The government gave assuracces that the files could only be used as statistics and not to pry into people's private lives.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP).-The White House tapes began a weeklong run in the House today to allow members to hear them before voting on the impeach-ment of President Nixon

Listening to

Nixon Tapes

In four rooms equipped with sound-recording gear and a total of 204 headsets, 19 tapes of Mr. Nixon's conversations with various White House sides are being played from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Members emerging from the first presentation of four Water-gate tapes today reacted generally along party lines, with Republicans noncommittal and Democrats reporting that their suspicions nf Mr. Nixon's involvement in tha Watergate cover-up were confirmed.

Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y. said. after three hours of listening, "It's damn discouraging when you hear this first hand. You begin to realize the conniving, the things you wouldn't think a president would be dealing with,"

Rep. Peyser said that he is leaning toward an impeachment vote. Another Republican, Jack Edwards of Alabama, who indicated that he would like to vote against impeachment, said that he had not heard anything on the tapes that changed his posi-

(NYI').—Buffalo meat, although it is retailing at considerably higher prices than beef, is turning out to be a bonanza for ranchers who started raising the animals as a hobby 10 years ago.

Ronald Gregory, vice-president of the National Buffalo Association, said at his ranch that the evergrowing demand for the meat by supermarkets, restaurants and individual buyers has resulted in a tenfold increase in the number of Americans whn are becoming buffalo ranchers.

"In 1967, our association's membership totaled fewer than 50, but today we have 540 paying members who are interested in buffalo breeding," Mr. Gregory stated. "The number of privately owned buffaln in the United States is now estimated ito bell between 25,000 to 20,000 as compared to fewer than 20,000 seven vears ago."

"Many of our members are in the same position that I'm in," he continued. "I can't provide enough buffalo meat to satisfy the demand because my 850-acre fenced-in ranch is too small to accommodate more than the 250 animals I now have. I'm looking around for a much larger spread where I could have at least 1,000 buffalo and then I'd be better able to cash in on the growing market."

According to Mr. Gregory, the average nationwide selling price a pound for prime boneless buffalo steak is about $4.93, which is 25 percent more than the retail figure for high-quality honeless beef. A similar percentage difference over the heef prices is found in the case of buffalo T-bone steaks, roasts and burger meat, he said.

People have discovered that buffalo meat is very tasty: they want to eat it and are willing to pay the price," he remarked when asked to explain the booming demand for steaks cut from the animal that is symbolic of the pioneer American West.

Buffalo are slaughtered and processed for the market in the same manner as cattle. The cuts are very similar to those of beef cattle and are cooked in the same way, Mr. Gregory said. Mr. Gregory denounced what he called "irresponsible reports" that the upsurge in buffalo meat popularity is leading to a reduction in the number of the animals. Only surplus males and a few old females are being slaughtered for the market, he

Kalmbach Says Ehrlichman Wanted to Defame O'Brien

By Eileen Shanahan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (NYT). -President Nixon's former personal attorney has told the House Judiciary Committee that John Enrichman was trying to leak

a story that the Democratic party chairman, Lawrence O'Brien, was in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service weeks after Ehrlichman knew that the IRS had found no basis for auditing Mr. O'Brien's tax

Herbert Kalmbach, the California lawyer who gave the testimony, also said that Ehrlichman had told him that "I am being pressured" to get the story defaming O'Brien printed:

Ehrlichman did not identify the source of the pressure. At the time of the episode, September, 1972, Ehrlichman's job as Mr. Nixon's chief domestic policy adviser was such that no one was in a position to give him an order except the President himself or the White House chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman, acting on behalf of the President. Discussed Audit Kalmbach's testimony, which was given to the committee behind closed doors in mid-July hut made public only last week, dovetails with the earlier testimony of others that Mr. Nixon was discussing an audit of Mr. O'Brien as late as Sept. 15, 1972, although the IRS had closed the case on Aug. 29.

Both former White House counselor John Dean 3d and Fred Buzhardt ir., who is still a White House lawyer, have said that there was a conversation about Mr. O'Brien's taxes in the President's office on Sept. 15, among the President, Dean and Mr.

Ehrlichman and Mr. Haldeman have both stated that they believed Mr. O'Brien was the only effective politician involved in the Democrats' 1972 campaign against Mr. Nixon.

Kalmbach, who has been sentenced to a 6-month to 18-month fail term after pleading guilty to two crimes stemming from his fund-raising activities for the Nixon campaign, testified that Ehrlichman had called him in September, 1972, to propose that Kalmbach plant the defamatory story about Mr. O'Brien. Kalmbach testified that Ehr-

They reported that they were ending any further inquiry into Mr. O'Brien's taxes and Ebrlichman, according to his own testimony, told Mr. Walters that he had done a "crappy job."

Coroner Rules Mama Cass Died Of Heart Attack

LONDON, Aug. 5 (UPI). - A coroner's court ruled today that singer Mama Cass Elliot, found dead in her bed here last Monday, died of a heart attack.

Prof. Keith Simpson, the Home Office pathologist, told the court that laboratory tests of vital organa showed the 32-year-old star of the former Mamaa and Papas group suffered from fatty degeneration of the heart muscle. Allan Carr, the singer's manager, testified she was more excited than usual about her ap-pearance at the Palladium.

Prof. Simpson said Mama Cass. who was found naked, sprawled diagonally across the bed, had not had anything to drink nor had she taken any drugs. He described her as weighing 205 pounds—"about twice what she should have weighed."

Text of Nixon Statement

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (UPI). The text of President Nixon's statement, issued today, releasing three transcripts to the public. I have today instructed my attorneys to make available to the House Judiciary Committee, and I am making public, the transcriots of three conversations with HR. Haldeman on June 23, 1972. I have also turned over the tapes of these conversations to Judge [John] Sirlca, as part

On April 29, in announcing my decision to make public the original set of White House transcripts I stated that "as far as what the President personally knew and did with regard to Watergate and the cover-up is concerned, these materialsgether with those already made available—will tell it all."

Shortly after that, in May, I made a preliminary review of some of the 64 taped conversations subpoensed by the special prosecutor.

Among the conversations listened to at that time were two nf those of June 23. Although I recognized that these presented potential problems, I did not inform my staff or my counsel of it, or those arming my case, nor did I amend my submission to the Judiciary Committee in order to include and reflect it. At the time. I did not realize the extent of the implications which these conversations might now appear to have. As a result, those arguing my case, as well as those passing judgment on the case, dld so with information that was incomplete and in some respects erroneous. This was a serious act of omission for which I take full reponsibility and which I deeply regret.

Since the Supreme Court's decision 12 days ago. I have ordered my counsel to analyze the 64 tapes and I have listened to a number of them myself. This process has made it clear that portions of the tapes of these June 23 conversations are at variance with certain of my previous statements. Therefore, I have ordered the transcripts made available immediately to the House Judiclary Committee 50 that they can be reflected in the committee's report, and in-sidered by the House and Senate. In a formal written statement ou May 22 of last year, f said that shortly after the Watergate breakin. I became concerned about the possibility that the FBI investigation might lead to the exposure cither of unrelated covert activities of the CIA, or of sensitive national security matters that the so-called "plumbers unit" at the White House had been working on, because of the CIA and plumbers' connection of some of those involved. I said that I. therefore, gave instructions that the FBI should be alerted to coordinate with the CIA, and to

That statement was based on my recollection at the time-some II months later-plus documentary materials and relevant public testimony of those involved

Limiting Exposure

The June 23 tapes clearly show. however, that at the time I gave tbose instructions I also discussed the political aspects of the situation and I was aware of the advantages this course of action would have with respect to limiting possible public exposure of involvement by persons connected with the re-election committee.

Review of the additional tapes has, so far, shown no further major inconsistencies with what I have previously submitted. While I have uo way at this stage of being certain that there will not be others. I have no reason to believe that there will be. In any case, the tapes in their entirety are now in the process of heing furnished to Judge Sirica. He has begun what may be a rather lengthy process of specific claims of executive privilege on portions of them and forwarding to the special prosecutor those tapes or those portions that are relevant to the Watergate in-

It is highly unlikely that this review will be completed in time for the House debate. It appears at this stage, however, that a House vote of impeachment is, as a practical matter, virtually a foregone conclusion and the issue therefore, will go to trial in the

In order to insure that no other significant, relevant materials are withheld. I shall voluntarily furn. ish to the Senate everything from these tapes that Judge Sirica rules should go to tha special prosecutor.

I recognize that this additional I am now furnishing may further damage my case especially because attention will be drawn separately to it rather than to the evidence in its entirety. In considering its implications, therefore, I urge that two points be borne in mind.

The first of these points is to remember what actually happened as a result of the instructions I gave on June 23. Acting director [Patrick] Gray of the FBI did coordinate with director [Richard) Helms and deputy director (Vernon) Walters of the CIA. The CIA did undertake an extensive check to see whether any of its covert activities would be compromised by a full FBI investiga-tion of Watergate. Deputy direc-Walters then reported back to Mr. Gray that they would not be enmpromised. On July 6, when I called Mr. Gray and when he expressed concern about improper attempts to limit his investigation, as the record shows. I told him to press ahead vigorously with his investigation, which he

The second point I would urge is that the evidence be looked at in its entirety, and the events be looked at in perspective. Whatever mistakes I made in the handling of Watergate, the basic truth remains that when all the facts were brought to my attention I insisted on a full investigation and prosecution of those guilty. I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety. does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal nf a president. I trust that as the constitutional process goes for-ward, this perspective will pre-

Man Is Convicted In Ga. Abduction

ATLANTA, Aug. 5 (AP) .- A federal jury convicted William Williams last right of extortion in connection with the kidnayping of Atlanta Constitution editor Reg Murphy.

Williams, 34, had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanily. But psychiatrists who testified at the weeklong trial disagreed on the defendant's mental state at the time of the abduction in February.

U.S. District Judge William O'Kelley set Aug. 30 for sentencing. Williams chuld get a maximum of 50 years in prison. Williams was not charged with kid-napping in the federal case because the government was unable to prove he crossed state lines while driving around with Mr. Murphy in his car.

Mr. Murphy was released after the owners of the Constitution paid $700,000 to free him. The ransom was later recovered.

Coda of an Empire

It is peculiarly appropriate that Abdultahun Abby Farah, UN under secretary for special political questions, is expected to play an important role in the forthcoming negotiations over the independence of Portugal's African territories. For not only is it an acceptance by Portugal of the authority-or at least influence-of the UN; the under secretary's full title is a recognition that the divorce of mainland Portugal from Africa constitutes a very special political problem indeed. Mr. Farah is also Somalia's amhessador to the UN.

It was the costly slough of the African wars that brought Portugal the freedom it now enjoys under a disillusioned military, And the new regime has come to accept the reality that pertial solutions for the African question, however rational, will not end the drain on Portuguese resources reprecented by those wars. The conetitutional provision that overseas territories are integral parts ol Portugal (as Algeria was a Department of France) has been eliminated; secretary-general Waldheim of the UN was able to announce that Portuguese Gulnea-Bissau would be recognized as independent, and that "immediate steps" would be taken by the Portuguese government to move toward the same status for Mozamhique, and seek "contects" as soon as possible for a similar goal with respect to Angola.

All of this constitutee the coda of an empire, the last notes of a turbulent symphony that began in the days of Prince Henry the Navigator, with the explorations of such men as Vasco da Gama, and the grand gesture whereby the Pope divided the new Western world between Spain and Portugal. But it cannot be expected that those dying chords will be harmonious; whatever the intentions of the government in Lisbon and of the UN, it is impossible that ties as old and as close as those between Portugal and Africa can he eevered without hitter

For the Africans themselves are by no means at one about the recults of the Portuguese renunciation. There are divided political groups within the territories at stake; there are fearful or ambitious neighbors near them. The post-colonial history of Africa has been far from peaceful, and whether one ascribes these difficulties to the colonial legacy, to lack of experience in responsible self-government or to the innate human tendency to make trouble, they constitute grave obstaclae to the ordarly transfer of authority from Lisbon to Africa.

Nevertheless, while national independence hrings its disappointments and bearthreake, there is an inevitability about the actions of Portugal, in seeking to free itself from the burdens of an outmoded empire, thet makes these letest decisions welcome. The weight of history in the face of change can he too greet to hear, and change, for good or ill, is the dominant theme of Africa today.

Good Start in Greece

In less than two weeks, Constantine Caramaniis and the wide spectrum of democratic forces supporting his government of national unity have transformed tha political climate in Greece, Mr. Caramanlis Is no miracle worker, hut-given the political realities in Greece after seven years of military dictatorship, plus the Cyprus crisis-It is difficult to see bow the 67-year-old premier could have progressed any more rapidly toward the restoration of national consensus, freedom and political democracy.

Mr. Caramanlis immediately restored freedom of speech and of the press, He decreed a sweeping political amnesty, releasing thousands who had been jailed and often tortured by the military police. And he restored the citizenship of eminent Greeks who had been stripped of rights for speaking or acting against the corrupt and repressive military regime.

Returning to Greece after 11 years in exile, he was able in a remarkably short time to construct a cabinet of experienced, quaiifled ministers representing most democratic tendencies from moderate left to moderate right and including fresh talent that had been imprisoned or exiled by the military rulers. By way of emphasizing the exodus of the armed forces from power, he named as defense minister a veteran civilian politician and foe of the fallen junta, former Foreign Minister Evanghelos Averoff. * * *

Mr. Caramanlis has also reinstated Greece's 1952 constitution, scrapping the junta's 1963 document which attempted to entrench the armed forces in a permanent position of decisive political power, beyond the control of any civillan government. He has reessigned some of the most duhious personnel from the former junta to remote poste far from the Athens headquarters.

What Mr. Caramanlis has thus far refused to do is to take drastic punitive action against the officers who overthrew the legitimete government in 1967 or even against those responsible for the persecutions and torture over the seven years of the dictatorship. Toe necessity for maintaining as much armed forces unity as possible in light of the Cyprus crisis is probably a factor in the premier's hesitation on this

Even many Greeks imprisoned or exiled ov the junta believe, however, that the armed forcee will clean their own house, thoroughly and quite promptly, if they are not subjected to wholesale humiliation for the junta's excesses. The decisive pressure for the withdrawal of Gen. Ioannides and his henchmen and for the invitation to Mr. Caramanlis to restore civilian rule came, after all, from within the army.

Senior officers, acutely embarrassed by the repression, might have overthrown the junta at various times during the last seven years had they not been persuaded that its continuation in power was favored by the United States. The report that Washington has now instructed its agencies, including tha CIA, to keep hands off Greek politics is as welcome as it is overdue.

So far, Mr. Caramanlis's performanceeven including his refusal to deal peremptorily with juota leaders and his postponement of any decision on the future of King Constantine and the monarchy—has enjoyed broad support. The only major dissenting voice has been that of Andreas Papandreou, son of the late premier, who has moved steadly leftward in his years of exile.

Mr. Papandreon will run great risk if he launches all-out political war on the government of national unity. There is no reason to doubt that Mr. Caramaniis will make good his pledge to hold free elections. probebly within slx months, and restore parliementary democracy at the earliest feasible moment.

Only a return to the hitter politicel warfare that helped hring on the 1967 coup. or the continuation of Turkey's reckless expansion on Cyprus, would be likely to disrupt the Caramanlis timetable and risk new political intervention by Greece'e armed forces. The allies of Turkey must make every effort to persuade it to he reasonable. Only Mr. Papandreou can decide if he also will be reasonable.

Views of Impeachment

When a U.S. president sneezes, Europe catches cold and the world gets a flu. Mr. Nixon's trial by the Senate will last "no less than two months." according to Mike Mansfield. Shift Against Turkey

In the early stages of the Cyprus crisis It was natural that there should he e lot of international sympathy for Turkey... Circumstences have now changed. The new Greek government is basking in domestic and foreign approval and there is widespread worry that its stability might he endangered by further humiliation in Cyprus, Even though it was not responsible for the situation in which it finds itself it is bound to heer some responsibility for the outcome. Its threat to boycott the Geneva talks may be tactical but it is an indication of the limits beyond which it feels it cannot allow Itself to be pushed. France's Big European Initiative

By James Goldsborough

PARIS-The French have now shown their hand on what their "major European initiative" before the year's end is to be. Another nine-nation summit meeting is to be convoked, this one in Paris and the French idea is to put a badly derailed Eurocommunity back nn the rails before it is too late.

The lessons of their disastrous meeting in Copenhagen last December still are fresh enough for the Europeans to be wary of future summits. But the perils of failure must be risked again, for there is a growing feeling in Europe that something must be done-in spite of the B: nish-if Europe is to be saved as a community of nations.

There is e strong sense of dejection here as Europe enters the August doldrums, Nothing has been working, and there even are those (Denis Healey is one) who say gulte simply that there is no European community any-more: that the three pillars that had been painfully erected-customs union, common egriculture policy and monetary union-have been torn apart by recent events, and that the community survives in name only.

Thus the sense of urgency in Paris. President Giscard d'Estaing wants to pull something out of the French chapeau before Dec. 31 while France is still chairing the community's Council of Ministers. Given his predilections, one might expect an effort to push forward the now dormant plans for economic and monetary naion. But the word is that what the French have in mind is more political than eco nomic.

Change of View

Before their collective departure earlier this year, Messrs, Brandt, Pompidou and Heath were coming to understand that the traditional analysis ebout economic agreement leading Europe forward into political union and ultimate defense cooperation was wrong. Karl Marx, with his economic Interpretation of history, might have agreed with that thinking, but reality did not. What Europe lacked was not the economic necessity to nnite, but the political will. The Copenhagen summit was to provide the great political leap forward, but along the way the Middle East and its oil intruded,

Energy, not the British, is the great problem confronting Europe todey, and the most responsible for undoing the work that had been done. Europe can get along without the British-perhaps would be better off-hut not without the Middle East. The Euro-Arab dialogue that began here last week could be-and the word could must he emphasized of high ultimate political sigmificance. On energy, as on other matters. the British influence in the conmunity is highly negative. When Peter Shore, the trade secretary, vetoed the EEC's energy policy in Brussels two weeks ago-what the Times called "his finest hour as an anti-marketeer"-he upset everyboly, despite immediate official British efforts to minimize the importance of the veto. But what practical good does it do to learn post facto that a British minister has exceeded his government's instructions—as Shore did, for those instructions are now known-when the rebei minister succeeds in his sabotage? That James Callaghan, the foreign secretary, and Mr. Shore cannot compose their differences on what British energy policy should be is of only acedemic interest in Brussels.

Other Points

Two nther points on Europe and energy can be made. One is that the British are highly suspicious of their partners, and what is seen as the Continent's dark plots to put its hands on British North Sea oil through some kind of common energy policy. Secondly, the community still is not unanimous on the role of the Group of 12, which was set up at the Washington energy conference to adopt a common sharing policy among oil-consuming nations. It now is expected that this group of 12 nations will do its work inside the OECD, with France subsequently joining the group. It still is unclear how an OECD energy group, an EEC group and Euro-

Any kind of clear British result would improve the present situation. risen for the long summer recess, and will not be back until mid-October. What is more, it may not be back in the present form even then, for there is nothing to stop Mr. Wilson calling an election as the autumn approaches and before the House has reconvened. What is more still he will be sorely tempted. unless things go very wrong, to do just that, and moreover to time the dissolution so that the Labor. party gets its annual conference (first week in October) and the tremendous publicity springboard it would provide (especially since with an election in the offing, the members would tend to close ranks and shelve their deep and ranks and anerve them deep and bitter differences), while ensuring that the Tories have to cancel their own conference (second week in October) and get on with electioneering. And that is just the kind of scenario that would appeal most to Mr. Wilson But before we look ahead let us

But before we look ahead, let us look back. The parliamentary session that has ended was an extraordinary one, indeed one of the strangest in modern times. The knife edge result of the February election, with its resultant minority Labor government, produced a situation virtually without precedent since the party system in its present form was firmly established; again and again, government legislation was amended, or important parts of it defeated, by a combination of Conservative, Liberal and Nationalist votes against the solid. Labor, bloc. Labor, of course, complained that orderly political life was being made impossible. but that was only to be expected: the fascinating thing was the way in which the thing really seemed to work. Concerto in F

Re William Safire's article. "Concerto in F for Gen. Haig" CHT. July 26, and his account presented in a factual rather than implied manner, that "a voice with a Senior Official's eccent kept badgering him [Haig] in the background. This is journalism at its dirtiest (and if anything else, it bears out the good judgment of those responsible to have Safire's phone tapped). It's dirty because neither Haig nor Kissinger can do much about this slur. Contest the matter by going to court? Safire would swear up and down that he did hear what sounde like an accented voice pleading with Haig to keep mum. We must not forget that leaks

Political Motivation

Angered by Rep. Hogan's defection from the pro-Nixon camp, Dean Burch has called his decision "politically motivated" (IHT, July 27-28). This strikes me as a strange choice of words. Brasilia, an Imposing Capital, Lacks Third Dimension-Heart

By Marvine Howe

BRASILIA, Aug. 5 (NYT).-A good deal of courage, talent and hard work have gone into building this city of the future, but somehow the heart got lost along over the rejection of his design

Brasilia is now 14 years old and maturing. It is no longer a muserm in the wilderness 540 miles west of coastal civilization, but has effectively become the federal capital of Brazil. The government ministries, official agencies, diplomatic missions, private companies and workers from all over the country have moved here, but the city appears lifeless except for the maddening swirl of automobiles.

"What we must do now is to humanize Brasilia." says the new governor of the Federal District, Elmo Serejo Farias, who has amhitious plans to complete the capital's unfinished works, fill in the empty spaces and expand.

The goveroor has called on Brasilia's two original creators, architect Oscar Niemeyer and city planner Lucio Costa, to help. The city's founder, former President Juscelino Kuhitschek, gave Mr. Niemeyer and Mr. Costa complete freedom to build their dreams. However, after the establishment of the authoritarian military regime a decade ago, the two artists have kept their dis-

Mr. Niemeyer bas since designed an occasional building and recently presented a project for the new Ministry of Finance. It is said, however, that he was bitter for the international airport and the failure to complete two of his major works, the National Theater and lake bridge.

Mr. Costa plans to come to Brasilia next month for the first time in 10 years to review the city plans and see what can be done. He refuses to give his reasons for abandoning the city, but officials in the governor's office say it was because of "distortions" in the original plan.

While the abstract purity of Brasilia's lines has drawn worldwide praise, the city's lack of warmth is widely criticized. Some European architects have decried the monotony of the symmetric

"The miracle is that we Brazilians, who are not very fond of work, could build an imposing capital out of red dust and solitude in only three years' time and that it could resist the upheavals of the revolution," Mr. Costa declared, Referring to changes in his plan, Mr. Costa sald generously: "The only certainty in town planning is that reality will be

He said that the original pilot plan was conceived with three dimensions: monumental propor-tions for the administration buildings, medium scale for the residential areas and a crowded, congested area in the city center with pedestrian malls, cases, restaurants, cinemas, bars and tea houses where people could meet.

Mr. Costa's original plan describes this city center as "a mix-ture of Piccadilly Circus, Times Square and the Champs-Elysees." Today, however, the center of Brasilia is mostly half-filled parking lots, with a large and generally empty shopping center on one side of the mall and a block of shops and movies under construction on the other side. Many people doubt that a heart can be grafted into the city at this point.

Now that he has retired, Edson can manage to write about eight books a year. Each takes about eight weeks, although he once finished one, "Slaughter House," in 11 days. The past five years or so he has been able to live on his literary earnings, which average about £2,000 a year.

His ambition is to see one of his stories on the screen "as long as they stick to my plot and don't muck things about." Edson has done some mental casting: Elvis Presley for the Kid, Rick van Nuyter for Mark Counter (his hero evolved from the muscle men in the Italian Hercules films) and someone as like Raquel Welch as possible for a glamorized ver-sion of Calamity Jane. But there is no one around to play his favorite, Dusty Fog. He would have chosen Audie Murphy, who died in a plane crash in 1971.

Amazingly enough, Edson did not get to the West he describes so vividly in his books until this summer. He didn't think that mattered much though; "because, anyway, my West is the Hollywood West, the Gene Autry-Roy Rogers and, especially, the Audie Murphy-West, I was meant to go last year, but the date, June but they irritated him, "because there was never enough detail about how the glorious hero caught the bloody villain! I take enormous trouble over researching details for my books, even, for instance, to the extent of writing to the Sheriffs' Association of Texas, who sent me the entire penal code. Very nice the American police are, over things like that."

He himself is far from being an action man. The truth is, I'm bone idle. I was forced to seek a job with the post office only when my doctor examined me and sent around the undertaker for my measurements the next day, I took the hint and looked for a job with plenty of

The thing with writing is that you sometimes get really dry, and those are the worst times. I become impossible to live with and the wife packs me off to Ireland to fish, But it doesn't happen very often, because when I begin feel short of ideas, all I have to do is walk around the corner.

After leaving school at 14, he worked in a stone quarry for four years, and then joined the Army. It was while serving in Kenya that he began writing adventure stories about the settlers there. NEW YORK (WP),-America's performing arts companiesalready groveling for donations to meet costs—are inexorably heading into a far steeper financial crisis, according to a survey of the arts released by the Ford Foundation.

The survey took several years to complete and encompasses 90 per cent of the spending by all nonprofit performing arts companies in the United States.

All the costs and income factors of 27 theaters, 31 operas, 91 symphony orchestras and 17 ballet and modern dance troupes surveyed for the six years that ended with the 1970-71 sea

The report says that "... if the total earnings gap continued to grow throughout the present de-cade at exactly the rate it grew during the survey period, it would triple by 1980, even before any in-flation factor was applied to it."

Earning Gap The report said: "The survey fully documents the fact, well known to professionals in the field, that the labor-intensive performing arts, whose productivity cannot keep pace with the ever increasing productivity of the industrial economy in which they exist, are faced with an ever in-creasing gap between their operating costs and their earned

But the survey also states that "the very nature of performing groups along with their need for tic freedom and goals make it both impossible and undesirable for them to limit their spending to what they can earn." One interesting finding of the audit is that "each art form imposes limitations upon the extent to which the management, in its efforts to keep costs at a minimum while maintaining artistic quality, can vary cost compo-

NEW PALTZ, N.Y. (NYT). Two fledgling peregrine fal-cons, bred in captivity this spring, have been released here to learn to swoop and soar and hunt as the first lesson in their survival training for freedom.

The breeding, release and training of the falcons is part of an informal national experiment to save the species from extinc-tion. The birds, which have been living in a covered nest stop the 10-story faculty tower of the New Paltz State Teachers College, will spend the next month being weaned by their "parent," Dr. Heing Meng, an ornithologist who three years ago was the first person successfully to breed peregrines in captivity.

When September comes, this pair is expected to be strong enough to join the southward mi-gration. If they survive the flight to the tropics and back, they should settle next spring on the same faculty building or at least on a cliff in the nearby mountains, which two decades ago were heavily populated with the

There are still a number of peregrines in Canada, and a few along the Pacific Coast and in the Southwest. A recent survey of the Rocky Mountains showed that there were only 20 pairs of the swift birds of prey in that area, only two of the pairs producing eggs that hatched. Dr. Tom Cade, a professor at Cor-nell's ornithology lab, said there were no peregrine falcons born wild on the East Coast any longer, although they were numerous here years ago.

Two Oil States Said to Buy U.S., U.K. Bonds

PARIS, Aug. 5 (IHT). -Saudi Arabia has reportedly agreed to buy $12 billion of U.S. government bonds while Kuwait will buy $1 billion of U. S. debt and £750 million of U. K. government securities. the weekly publication Middle Rast Money (Memo) said today. The purchase of the bonds, both in the United States and Britain, were said to have begun last Thursday.

Details of the agreement were said to have been outlined in a letter from U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon to Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian finance ministera during his visit to the Middle Fast last month

Memo says Mr. Simon sald that the United States can absorb anything from $75 million to $750 million a month from Kuwait beginning Aug. I for a period of three to six months and suggested that the figure for Saudi Arabia could reach up to $2 billion

Yugoslavia Acts To Curb Imports

BELGRADE, Aug. 5 (AP-DJ).— Yuguslavia introduced today several "Temporary", measures to-curb imports, including an order const to a centralized that 35 items, chiefly consumer goods, be imported only with special permission.

of whether 1974 will be declared a recession year. The item that distorted the second-quarter figures, it turns out, was the assumption of majority ownership by Saudi Arabia of Aranco, the formerly U.S.-owned oil company that produces 96 per cent of the oil in Saudi Arabia, which has more oil reserves than any other country in the world. The transaction reduced the "net exports of goods and services," component of the GNP because it reduced the flow of corporate profits from abroad. The drop in overseas oil income -which like other remitted overseas profits is included in the GNP-was $2.5 billion in the second quarter. Herman Liebling, a Senior Treasury Department economist, has calculated that "in constant dollars, this decline was large enough to account for the entire decline in real GNP in the second quarter."

The Saudi government announced in June that it had reached agreement with Aramco the Arabian American Oil Co. to increase its ownership of the company from 25 to 60 per cent, retroactive to Jan. 1. Aramco, which produces more oil than any other company in the world, was founded in 1933 by Standard Oil Co. of California. Its ownership has been expanded to include Texaco, Exxon. Mobil and—as of two years ago—the Saudi government, which is expected eventually to assume 100 per cent ownership. Mr. Liebling points out that the change in corporate ownership, and the accompanying drop in return profits, has nothing whatever to do with production or employment or consumption at bome. He has calculated what is called the "gross domestic product," a measure used by most other countries, which excludes income flows from abroad. This measure showed a tiny increase of 0.1 per cent in the second quarter instead of the 1.2 per cent decline reported for the

Mr. Liebling argues that "the GNP measure has provided an incomplete and, indeed; misleading indicator of developments in the domestic economy, because of oil income swings," which have been "very large this year."

Mr. Liebling argues that such measures as industrial production, employment and electric power production, indicate that the economy grew in the second quarter. However, be concedes that the GNF, quite apart from the distortion caused by overseas oil income, showed weakness in several import sectors.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Dresdner Backs Private Bank

Dresdner Bank has become an unlimited partner-the fifth and largest-in the private bank Sloman Bank of Hamburg, and Dresdner's 25 per cent-owned unit Privatebankhaus Hardy has be came a limited liability partner in Sloman. Dresdner Bank spokesman says the more is a preventive measure to give greater security to Sloman Bank. The action is a result of difficulties created for West German banks by the collapse of Bankhaus Herstatt, he adds, saying that Dresdner regards this as a possible model for further strengthening measures within the panking community. Such an action, under which a major bank guarantees a smaller bank, is preferable to letting the bank collapse, he The Hardy and Sloman Banks had been negotiating closer cooperation for some time and Dresdner stepped into the discussions last Priday to allow them to come to a quicker conclusion, he notes. Financial details of the move, which takes immediate effect, were not revealed. Sloman Bank also becomes a partner in Hardy Bank under the arrangement.

Charles Pililod jr., chairmao, says that "because of eco-nomic conditions we are now holding back on some projects." As for flext year, he says "a lot will depend on the market, but we will probably be back up to the $300 million level." Mr. Pilliod, explaining the cutbacks, says that "one of our goals is to improve profitability and in line with that we deterred some projects that were not so pressing; we followed a more selective investment

Argyll Field North Sea Out put Begins A spokesman for the U.S. consortium Hamilton Brothers says the Argyll field in the North Sea will begin producing oil by about the end of September, making it possible for British motorists to use domestic gasoline by November. The field, 200 miles east of Scotland's Firth of Forth, has an expected average production of about 25.000 barreis a day, less that 2 per cent of Britain's needs. Hamilton says about 20 per cent of the Argyl! field's crude oil will be turned into casoline, about 7.5 million gallous monthly. The company estimates that Britain could be sell-

Farm Payouts Could Hurt Inflation Fight

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP-J).—Alternately flooded by DJ).—Alternately flooded by rain and seared by drought, U.S. farmers appear headed toward far poorer hervests of basic crops this year than most forecasters predicting only a few weeks

That's obviously grim news for Nixon administration economists who were counting on a generous rise in wheat, corn and cotton output this year to help check rampaging inflation. Equally unpleasant, though less obvious, is the import of crop disaster to the budget parers who are searching for ways to carve as much as $5 billion from this fiscal year's budget as part of the same anti-inflation effort.

NYSE Rallies on Talk Of Nixon Resignation

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (IHT) — Prices registered their first solid gain in eight sessions on the New York Stock Exchange today amid speculation toat President Nixon would make an important an-nouncement on impeachment.

The rally took shape wheo the White House postpoued its regular morning news briefung and said "information" would be available after the close. However, officials later said the announcement would have nothing to do with a resignation.

In Los Aogeles, after Mr. Nixon's speech, trading continued slow on the Pacific Stock Exchange, showing "no reaction that we can see" to President Nixon's late-t statements on the Watergate cover-up, a spokeswoman said.

Earlier, the market had responded positively to Senate Republican whip Robert Griffin's call for Mr. Nixon to resign in the 'public interest.' The Dow Jones industrial average gained 7.82 to 760,40, after being ahead over 13 points in

Shortages Hit U.S. Industry

By Michael C. Jensen NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (NYT)—Despite a slowdown in the rate of business growth, the nation's manufacturers are faced with a broad array of material shortages. a highly regarded business survey reported over the weekend. Steel was the most prominently mentioned commodity in short supply, according to the survey conducted by the National Association of Purchasing Manage-

Interviews with corporate officials supported the survey's findings.

Compounding the problem, some industrialists said, is it tightening of world markels which has resulted in a decline in imports of steel and a surge During the first six months of the year, only six million tons of steel products were imported, according to the American Iron and Sircl Institute, compared with 7.7 million tons imported during the first half of 1973. Despute life decline in import volume, prices have risen. As a result, the dollar value of imported steel row? from $1.4 billion during the 1973 period to $1.6 bil-lion in the first half of 1974. Steel exports, on the other

SOCIETE NATIONALE DES PETROLES D'AQUITAINE

The Annual General Meeting of shareholders held on June 14, 1974 under the Chairmanship of Mr Pierr: GUILLAUMAT approved the accounts for the 1973 financial year. Sales for the period under review were Fr.F. 1,826 million as against the Fr.F. 1.554 nullion reported for the previous year. Not funds from operations totalled Fr.F. 664 million as compared to the Fr.F. 654 million recorded in 1972. Net income increased to Fr.F. 351 million from Fr.F. 337 million in 1972.

The 1973 consolidated net income rose to Fr.F. 438 million on sales of Fr.F. 2,942, compared to respectively Fr.F. 337 million and Fr.F. 2,106 million for the previous year. Consolidated net funds from operations totalied Fr.F. 1,034 million as against Fr.F. 801 million in 1972.

The net dividend per share of Fr.F. 50 par value was fixed at Fr.F. 12.00, supplemented by a tax credit of Fr.F. 6.00 for shareholders resident in France of of similar status, bringing the total dividend to Fr.F. 18.00 per share. In his address the Chairman outlined the unin points in the development of the energy market and went on to indicate the favourable aspects which have benefited the Company since the beginning of 1974, particularly: The increase in gas prices recently authorized by the Freuch Government which, while still remaining inadequate in respect to level of international transactions, had made possible the mecessary development of hydro-carbons exploration and production programs; these will double between

Moreover SNPA, again in association with ERAP and with the same participation percentage, has joined a group of European companies exploring Iranian soil termed "Egoco", where large gas deposits have been located; - The Company's recent interest in ores and metals, particularly nickel, following the agreement concluded last March with Societé LE NICKEL and providing for LE NICKEL's cession of half of its nickel activities situated in France and New Caledonia subject to certain conditions.

The Chairman then went on to say that comparison of SNPA results for the first four months of 1974 with those of the corresponding period in 1973 showed an increase in sales of 63.4% from Fr.F. 456 million to Fr.F. 778 million. Aquitaine's consolidated sales were Fr.F. 1,516 million, an increase of 96.3% when compared with sales of Fr.F. 772 million for the same period last year.

Mr. GUILLAUMAT concluded by emphasizing the factors favourable to the Company's future, particularly as regards research and the exploitation of on and off-shore hydrocarbon deposits, for which the Company could avail itself of the lectioncal and scientific competence of the ELF-AQUITAINE Group. as well as diversifying into petrochemicals, pharmaceutics, etc., where results have been most encouraging.

The energy crisis: There's no simple solution. So Tenneco's tackling the problem on many fronts.

Start with the fossil fuels, Gas. Oil. Coal. Tenneco is into each of them.

Exploring, producing, reiming, transporting gas and oil. Developing coal technologies. And investing substantial amounts of capital in the process.

Pipelining natural gas was the idea. matistacted our company. Today we are the largest transporter of natural das in the U.S. We are searching in the Bult of Melecofor new deposits of this clear -burning fuel and are lunding other producers to develop Enoughtields. Negotiations are in progress. for importation to the U.S. of liquetied natural gas from other countries.

The problem of transporting oil and natural gas over the high seas involves our Newport News shippard in an important way. We're investing $170 million to further expand the nation's largest privately-owned shipbuilding facility. Objective: to produce a new breed of mammoth ocean going fuel. transports. Examples are the ULCC (UltraLarge Crude Carrier) and the LNG (LiqueFed Natural Gas) Carrier.

Next, coal. An abundant supply Les winin U.S. borders. But few industries and homes are equipped to burn it in solid form. Can it be converted into pipeline quality gas and synthetic oil at a feasible cost? Tenneco is helping pevelop such a technology; two pilot plants now in operation should soon provide important answers.

Now come up out of the ground and think elomic. Tenneco, drawing on its experience in building nuclear ships, teamed up with Westinghouse in the development of the floating difshore nuclear power plant. The joint venture, Offshore Power Systems, is now constructing a shipyard-type facility to produce these plants on an assembly line basis. These offshore plants offer an alternate solution to the question of available land sites in congested coastal areas.

And we're also building for the future in other areas. Construction and farm equipment, automotive parts, chemicals, packaging, agriculture and land development.

Because meeting challenges makes a company grow.

2 reasons why the price of SILVER may rise steeply

Two powerful forces are at work today which make a steep rise in the price of silver seem inevitable.

First, silver, like many other natural resources, is in short supply. The demand for silver surpassed new production for each of the last 23 years. And for each of the last 13 years, the demand for silver surpassed new production by more than 100

This excess of demand over supply is execting a strong, steady upward pressure on the price of silver. During the 1960s the price of silver rose 95%. So far in the 70s, the rise has been

Second, we're in an era of worldwide inflation. People throughout the world are losing confidence in the ability of governments to check inflation. And when that happens, they seek the security of precious metals such as silver, rather than paper

Indeed, for nearly 2,600 years, since the first silver coinage, knowledgeable investors have turned to silver for financial protection—because silver generally performs well in bad times.

For example, during Chile's recent occade of inflation, the price of silver increased more than 1,500 times. During Germany's nightmarish runaway inflation following World War 1, the price of silver increased more than 91 billion times. And during the 33 years of our current inflation, the price of silver has increased more than 10-fold.

Harry Browne, who correctly predicted the first dollar devaluation in 37 years, now writes in his new book, You Can Profit from a Monetary Crisis, "Silver offers a way to hedge against a depreciating dollar, to be on the right side of a shortage for a change, to be relatively iovuloerable to the next depression, and to preserve a long-term store of value through a runaway inflation."

Now, our new booklet shows you the why's and how's of silver investing. In The Case for Silver by Louis E. Carabini, President of the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, you'll discover: • Why worldwide silver consumption is in a powerful long-term

- The unique properties of aliver and why it is an essential and unsub-atturable commodity in many industries; 11 facts about the silver mining industry that point to higher prices;
- The silver shortage charted, with timing estimates; Case histories of 4 famous inflations (including Germany's). Investment analyst T. J. Hold's first-hand account of living through a

THE DEATH OF THE DETECTIVE

By Mark Smith. Knopf. 596 pp. $8.96.

Trs simple to follow the main process of following visible chur action of Mark Smith's The to an objective conclusion.

Death of the Detective, the third Unfortunately, this novel Death of the Detective," the third . novel by a young writer who teaches English at the University of New Hampshire. A dying Chicago business tycoon named Frazer Farquarson is murdered in the bedroom of his huge Lake Forest mansion. But shortly before his death, he has alerted a network of his associates of the impending foul play, and hardly has his heart stopped beating when one of them—a wealthy, retired detective named Arnold Magnuson-picks up the scent of the killer.

During the next 36 hours or so. Magnuson tracks down clues all over the city and its outskirts. But instead of catching up with the killer, he stumbles along a horrifying trail of fresh murders. So predictable are the killer's movements and yet so clusive in the second fresh murders. his person that soon Magnuson begins to wonder if he himself isn't somehow responsible for the slaughter. Eventually, his very sanity is cast into the balance, and, as you can guess from the novel's title, his life as well.

But it's not so easy to explain what Smith is trying to do with his strong and compelling story line. We know from practically the beginning who the murderer really is, so obviously Smith isn't writing a whodunit. We can also be fairly certain that the story won't boil down to a confrontation between the detective and the murderer, so clearly the author isn't siming for a thriller.

In fact, so enormous is the novel's conception -so diverse the number of its important characters, so complex the weav-ing of its subplots, so intense the realism of its setting, and so rich the tones of its prose and imagery - that one begins to sus-pect at times that it is meant more to be a prose environment than a controlled work of art; and that it is up to the reader to make out of it whatever he wants to. Indeed, not the least of the suspense of reading "The Death of the Detective" lies in trying to figure out just exactly what it is the author is trying to do. As for me-the book I made out of all this was an intensely interesting one .. for a while, what I chose to see developing was a figurative clash between the worlds of black and white. Or, if you will, a clash between Soul and Mind, between Humility and Arrogance, between the Powerless and the Powerful, if I may be permitted to over-achematize a system of literary clues that is far too complex to summarize adequately here. And the title of "The Death of the Detective, would presum-

And that was a the difference in the world. Still. I can't complain that was very disappointed by the di-appearance of the novel I though I was reading. After all, the six pense of following it carried it far enough along to get me is terested in all the other thing that Smith tries to do. Which in turn forced me to realize whi a first-rate pace he eventual establishes (with descriptive ar action passages alternating satisfying proportion) and encounter two superb scenes the the story's main action in or of them a hired killer botch an assignment so badly that eve Jimmy Bresiin will have to a: plaud).

The heart-slam contract reached by North-South on the diagramed deal is a slightly inferior proposition. Even if South can handle the trumps for the loss of loss of a club trick.

The deal was played during the finals of the Spingold knockout team championship in New York : recently.

The bidding needs some explanation. The response of one no-trump to one spade was forcing, although this style did not change anything. After South's forcing jump to three hearts, North's bid of four diamonds showed a heart fit plus the diamond ace, hinting mildly at a slam.

East reized the obsace to double and ask for a diamond lead. South's pass of the double showed second-round control of diamonds, and influenced his decision to go on over four hearts. Five hearts was a specialized response to Blackwood, promising two key cards. In effect, the king of trumps was counted as a fifth

South won the opening dismond lead with dummy's ace, and led a low heart. East put up the ace, thus solving South's first problem, and shifted to a club. Now South had to decide whether to take the circh finesse, 2 50 per cent chance, or to put up the club see and hope for a three-three spade break, 2.36 per cent chance. East's club lead was no clue, for that would have been the right defense whether or not he hald the chib king

But there was a subtle clue from East's bidding or rather, his failure to bid. The double for four diamonds strongly suggested that East held the K-Q of its suit. He had also produced to heart see. If in addition he he the club king, there was a fe chance that he would ha found a bid on the first rour Shenherd South therefore is ferred correctly that the ch king was on his left. In that car the only chance was for the spades to break. Deliberate going against the percentage with good reason, he put up the club see, drew the missistrumps, cached spades.

When this suit obligingly division the next few days also appear crucial for the striking NFL Players Association and its memhers, most of whom remain away from training camps. The association gathered 25 team representatives yesterday in Washington and, for the time heing, the strikers still appear united. Only Dallas was not represented. The five-bour meeting was held to bring the representatives up to date and only one vote was taken -to see how the players on the picket lines felt about the stance of the union's executive commit-

A vote of confidence was asked hy Steve Tannen of the Jets and the players adopted it unanimousiv.

Negotiations in the dispute broke down Thursday and were scheduled to resume tomorrow. Conceivably, the next policy move on the part of the players may be a group-style return to training camp during the week, even with the strike atill unsettled and feelings between the feuding parties running strong.

The theory behind a largescale return would be threefold: rejoining the team would be a popular move among fans, who have shown little support for the players during the strike: it would allow the players to solidify their various positions with coaches, and it would shift the pressure to the owners to reach a settlement.

A decision to return in groups, instead of having individuals crossing association picket lines. also would establish team unity and support for the principles of the players' association.

A Dinner Lineup Evokes Some Fond Sports Memories

By Red Smith

MILWAUKEE, Wisc., Aug. 5 (NYT) .-A boy of 14 or so stepped up to the dais and pushed a piece of paper in front of Buddy Baer. While Max Baer's little brother scribbled an autograph, the kid's gaze moved uncertainly right and left, searching for a familiar face. "Get Jimmy Crowley." a man suggest-

"Two seats over there." The name brought no look of recognition to the boy's face. "Left halfback on the four horsemen of Notre Dame," the man said. Obediently, the kid presented his paper as directed. "He's never heard of the four horsemen," the man said. "No," Judge Bob Cannon said. "They played their last season together exactly 50 years ago. You should have told him Junmy was the coach who taught football to Vince Lombardi."

The Fraternal Order of Eagles in national convention assembled were holding their annual sports dinner. Eagles are not an endangered species, no matter what the environmentalists say. There were about 1,800 in the flock scanning the dais and identifying the guests: Bob Feller, Walte Hoyt, Ken Keltner, Johnny Logan, Ray Berres and retired umpire Jocko Conlan, from baseball; Ziggie Czarobski, Ray Nitschke, Crowley and the other halfback on the four horsemen, Don

"I did that on hash," he told his manager, Joe Gould. "Get me a piece of steak and I'll show you what I can do." Gould got him the steak and a match with Max Baer, and Jim won the heavyweight championship of the world Then be was fighting a young and

For example, when a report comes out that the cost of living has gone np. we immediately contact the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture and tell them to do nothing about it. If we see unemployment rising, we call in the labor people and explain to them why it would be better to ignore it."

"How do you feel about high interest rates?" "We feel very strongly about ONDON (IHT) .- Valery and Galina Panov are in London for about 10 days, thanking the people who worked on their behalf when they were heing persecuted in Russia, having discussions with Maxim Gershunoff, their new American impresario, and-as Panov put it-"spying" on the London ballet and theater scene. I saw them for an hour in the small but comfortable modern Mayfair apartment which has been lent them for their visit. Panov, now beardless, thinner and younger looking than when he left the Soviet Union, talked about their past and their future. He is not a quick, incisive talker like Rudolf Nureyev so that an hour, interrupted by telephone calls and other visitors, was not enough, especially as Panov is thoughtful and clearly has a lot to say. His answers to questions tend to be roundabout; not evasive, but balanced and careful. He is anxious not to exaggerate. and to be fair; for example, when talking about conditions for dancers and choreographers in the Soviet Union, he was eager to point out that he realizes that conditions in the West can be difficult too. However, his experiences have naturally left him hostile to the Soviet system, and wryly hitter about those in the West who were nervous of giving him and his wife public support. As everyone knows he was fired from the Kirov for applying to emigrate to Israel, was prevented from dancing or even taking classes. and was subjected to secret police persecution; Galina Panov's mother was used to bring pressure for a divorce and to try to prevent them leaving the country, and Galina receotly had a miscarriage. I did not know about Valery Panov's family: "My mother was terrified that I might be forced into a psychiatric hospital or prison, and she died of shock and fear about a year ago. My father is now a hero with the Soviet authorities because he is a loyal Communis and persecuted me. He loved me in his own way but disapproved of my wanting to leave the country." Panov feels very close to his brother, a literary historian, who now teaches in Vilna and who has also applied for an exit visa to emigrate to Israel.

Why did Panov want to leave the Soviet Union? Partly because he is an independent and questing spirit; once he had reached a high level as a principal dancer at the Kirov he wanted to explore new pastures. Partly because he is Jewish, and "the Soviet regime to have external enemies and has placed the Jews high on the list." There has always been anti-Semitism in Russia; although Panov's father is Jewish and his mother half-Jewish, they had "Russiao" rather than "Jewish" placed oo his passport as a boy to protect him from discrimination. Wheo he was recalled from his only foreign tour, in the United States in 1958, he was accused of Zionism and associating with international Jewish organizations which he had not even heard of at that time, "Soviet Jews are much worse off than other racial or religious minorities because the authoritles are very suspicious of them, because of their possible connections with Israel."

The final spurs to Panov's decision to emigrate were provided by official interference with his attempt at choreography. In 1971 he was put in charge of a company of 15 dancers in Vilna, while still remaining a principal of the Kirov. "The company worked well and I made a ballet to music by Blood, Swest and Tears, the American pop group. Colleagues whom I respected liked the ballet, but various officials interfered and told me how I should work, so we never got beyond the final rehearsals." Later, for the Kirov, he did a ballet about the Pugachev Cossack revolt: the authorities did not like his symbolic treatment of the crowd and the ballet was condemned as anti-Soviet" and never publicly performed. I asked Panov why it had been so difficult for him and his wife to get out, considering that the cellist Rostropovitch and various writers like Solchenitsyn have now been allowed to live abroad or have even been expelled from the country. He pointed out that this policy is new and did not exist when he applied to emigrate in 1973, and he answered with a smile when I suggested that his own struggle and the international support he aroused may have helped to change the policy. He is deeply grateful to leaders of the British theater like Lord Olivier, Sir John Gielgud and Paul Scofield, who did not know him personally but who took so much trouble on his behalf. "They gave me my life." On the other hand, he is distinctly cool about Balanchine and Robbins, the two great American choreographers whose work he very much admires.

"I have heard that Balanchine not only refused to sign the petition on our behalf but also threatened members of the New York City Ballet that they would jeopardize their positions in the company if they signed And although I asked Robbins to boycott the international ballet competition in Moscow last year, he still came and went round asking people how the Panovs were getting on!" Last year, Panov says, he sometimes felt as if "Jewish blood is cheaper than oil." He cannot understand how Robbins, who is himself Jewish, could hobnob with the Soviets, and he recalled the way some American Jews used to trade with Nazi Germany. "People refuse to realize what is going on in Russia."

Should Westerners boycott visiting Soviet companies like the Bolshoi? He paused for a long time, saying 'That is a difficult question. The Soviet Union sends groups abroad to divert attention from what goes on inside the country, to create illusions. People must show they are oot taken in by the illusions." But "actors and artists are not guilty; they are being used by the regime, and they them-selves should not be punished. I think it is wrong to demonstrate against them by releasing mice in the theater during a performance; people should find some other way of expressing their feeling."

Why the Kirov?

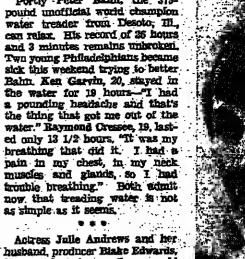

I also asked him why, although many leading Kirov dancers-Nurcyev, Makarova, Baryshnikov and the Panovs—have left, no Bolshoi principals have defected or asked to emigrate. "Bolshoi dancers are much more privileged; their standard of living is two or three times higher than that of Kirov dancers, because they get far more opportunities to do foreign tours. Also the Bolshoi is much more careful about selecting dancers; only dancers who are completely trusted and known to be 'safe' for foreign tours are accepted."

What of the future? Immediately, the answer is further practice and training at their new home in Israel, and a debut concert performance with the Israel Philharmonic in November. But there is no classical ballet company in Israel and in any case "after having so many years subtracted from our lives, we want to be free to dance with different companies all over the world." I jocularly suggested a new company led by all the ex-Kirov dancers. "Maybe it could be done but there is a difference between them and us. They were able to leap out so easily, and establish themselves in the West at once, while we had to suffer for so long. I don't know what sort of dancer Nureyev is now, though we were at school together, and I hear he is marvelous. Baryshnikov is a unique classical soloist with a marvelous

The Panovs want to dance all sorts of classical work, old and new, and they want to dance together. "But I will not dance in Balanchine's ballets-my technique gained over the years would probably be suitable, but my soul is looking forward to complete indepeudence." It will obviously take time for the Panovs to adjust to their new freedom and to find the right paths ahead, but they have already proved their determination,

Swiss watchmakers developed the quartz watch in order to improve still further the precision for which their timepieces had long been justly famed. Today, a high quality quartz watch like that made by Girard-Perreganx of La Chaux-de-Fonds, Switzerland, is accurate to within about 1 minute a year. But harnessing quartz's ultra-precise vibrations implied a resort to electronics, the basic technology behind computers. The Gimrd-Petregaux Quartz, for instance, has an integrated circuit equivalent to more than 300 transistors on a surface of only 5 sq. mm. Besides replacing most of an ordinally movement's numerous parts. the integrated circuit cannot wear out and requires no servicing. For further information simply send this coupoo to Grand-Puregaux S.A. 2301 La Chaux-de-Fonds / Switzerland.
